Terrain description:	The Stenderup Skovene are quite flat, but with steep slopes and slopes down towards the Little Belt and Kolding Fjord. There are some curve details on these slopes. The forest is structured by a clear road network of long straight forest roads. There are not many paths, but some traces from forestry work. The traces are seen in the forest either as openings in the vegetation, old tractor tracks or different ground vegetation. There is predominantly deciduous forest with tall trees, planted on a clay forest floor. The floor is drained by many ditches, most of them only with seeping water. In some areas quite open, and undergrowth has been able to spread. The undergrowth is least widespread in early spring.  The image is a topographic map of a forested area. It features brown contour lines indicating elevation changes. A network of blue lines represents forest roads and ditches. Green areas represent forest cover, with some areas marked with green 'x' symbols. The map shows a complex pattern of roads and drainage systems, with some areas appearing more open than others.  Find an old map on the event page.
